

LASER HAIR REDUCTION INFORMED CONSENT

Laser Hair Reduction (LHR)

Laser Hair Reduction (LHR) is a non-invasive treatment designed to remove unwanted hair from various parts of the body.

How It Works:

- Laser Device: Emits pulses of light energy.
- Action: Light energy penetrates the skin and destroys hair follicles.
- Cooling: The handpiece cools the surrounding skin.
- Sensation: You may feel a slight burning, stinging, or pinching sensation during the procedure.

Clinical Results:

Results can vary based on several factors:

- Skin Type: Different skin types respond differently to LHR.
- Hormonal Levels: Hormonal imbalances can affect the outcome.
- Hereditary Influences: Genetic factors may play a role.

Contraindications:

LHR is not suitable for:

1. Pregnancy and Breastfeeding: Women who are pregnant, breastfeeding, or planning to become pregnant.
2. Recent Medication: Those who have taken Accutane within the past six months or used any medications requiring limited sun exposure.
3. Hair Color: The laser may not be effective on blond or gray hair.

Risks and Complications:

All medical and cosmetic procedures come with certain risks and potential complications. The possible risks and complications associated with Laser Hair Reduction (LHR) include temporary reddening, burning, swelling, bruising, or the treated area. In rare cases, blistering, scarring, activation of cold sores may occur.
